What does “without papers” mean? Don’t we all come from somewhere? Traditional Senegalese storyteller (griot) Boubacar Ndiaye sings of the hopes and difficulties of the migrant experience. He and his ensemble tell of two loves: the land that welcomed them and their native land, never forgotten. When these three carriers of collective memory are united onstage, Africa stands tall in its encounter with the West. The artists transport the audience to Tivaouane in Senegal to discover the art of storytelling and the importance of family. In French and Wolof, with English supertitles.
